Fall/Winter 2010/2011

From the Desk of the Directors

We often hear about a torch or a baton being passed from one generation to the next. A more cooperative image might be a bucket; our forebears pass the pail to us, and we take our turn putting out the fires of fear and hatred, as part of the great bucket brigade of history.

One of those who passed the bucket to World Fellowship founder Eugenia Winston Weller was Susan B. Anthony. Mrs. Weller first met her while a teenager visiting in Cambridge, Mass. In 1895, when in her early twenties, she attended Anthony's 75th birthday celebration in Minneapolis.

The legendary suffragist sat alone in the middle of the stage, clad in a long black dress, looking out over the large crowd of well-wishers who had come to honor her. A procession of 75 brightly clad young girls filed across the stage. Each, as she passed, laid a rose in the great woman's lap.

As Mrs. Weller later wrote, "When she stood up quietly, gently, visibly moved by this tribute, Miss Anthony came to the front of the platform and spoke in a voice that must have reached out full of meaning to everyone in that house. 'I have seen the time when it was rotten eggs instead of flowers!'"

From the beginning, World Fellowship has taken the long view, understanding that the arc of history is long, and that we've got to be willing to be on the receiving end of some eggs to get to the roses. The Wellers understood this, and passed the bucket to Willard and Ola Uphaus, who made the Center blossom despite the rotten eggs of McCarthyism. They passed the bucket to Kit and Christoph Schmauch, who fought their own battles for inclusivity and tolerance.

And over the years, at every stage, the dream of World Fellowship has been nurtured by a community of volunteers, staff, guests and friends... laborers, students, artists, teachers, social workers, musicians, drivers, organizers, legal workers, health workers... Ordinary people incarnating the World in which we want to live, at World Fellowship and at their other homes.

The members of our Board of Trustees are water carriers of note, making tough decisions to ensure our organization's continued health. They are drawing up a campus plan with an initial focus on consolidating our current buildings. A difficult step in this direction was the decision to take down the building with the most serious issues, our cherished Farmhouse. They have prioritized important life safety upgrades and infrastructure improvements, and are sharing responsibility for meeting the fundraising goals to complete these projects. A future phase will replace lost guestrooms and look at adding meeting spaces to better serve retreat groups and fulfill our educational mission.

And the buckets continue to be passed... This year's Memorial Day Work Weekend was the most successful ever. Between early staff and enthusiastic volunteers, there were about three dozen people tending to farm, carpentry, and cleaning projects, and cooking for the crowd. The weekend gave the boost we needed to complete a list of 28 life safety projects in time for a mid-June inspection by the Conway fire chief. The community came through again, sharing skills, dollars, and hours to meet the needs.

World Fellowship continues to be an inspiring place for individuals, families, and groups to meet and share in the glories of nature and to wrestle with such questions as, "How do we best do social change work?" "What is needed in society today?" and, "How do we embody the best of what's possible?"

So, let's proudly carry the buckets that have been passed our way. Disregard the eggs. Remember: there will be roses!

What folks say: "World Fellowship seems to me so much a way of life – really the way of life."

Three Score and Ten

In one of the last poems of his last book, Charles Weller pondered with gratitude his good fortune at being able to enjoy more than his Biblically allotted “three score and ten” years of life. As the Center he and his wife Eugenia founded reaches this same milestone, it is interesting to note that Charles and Eugenia celebrated their seventieth birthdays within a year of setting up house and hanging out the World Fellowship shingle at the old Draper Estate on Drake Hill Road in May of 1941.

I marvel at what it took to embark on such an adventure at that time in their lives. But giving the “World Fellowship of Faiths” a physical home was a fitting capstone to the life of service they had shared, like the upper tier of the wedding cake that they saved for last. They sowed seeds of justice and brother- and sisterhood in many places, but World Fellowship is their most lasting monument.

Anniversaries of any kind, artificial markers though they are, stimulate us to reflect on the passage of time. Seventy years doesn't seem so long, in the grand scheme. Some pretty young-seeming people are turning seventy soon (Joan Baez, Jesse Jackson, Alexander Cockburn...) But over the course of nearly three quarters of a century, generations have come and left their mark, brought their children and their grandchildren, and gone on to join the ancestors.

Organizations can expect different life spans than regular mortals. This may trouble us when we think of corporations, but for organizations that are meaningful to us, we hope for immortality, or at least a Methuselah-like span. Nonetheless, the notion of “three score and ten” carries with it a whiff of mortality; as they reached that juncture, the Wellers considered what they wanted to accomplish with whatever time remained to them. Likewise, it seems a good moment to consider what we as an organization and a community wish to accomplish in the coming years.

Thomas Merton wrote, “Living is more than submission; it is creation.” My and Andrea's hope would be that World Fellowship continue to creatively live into its mission anew, settled in the contentment of being a second home for justice seekers, but unsettled in the sense that we recognize what is undone, and what could be done better, and try to remedy it.

In another poem, Charles Weller imagined the future of World Fellowship: “This forest-lake and mountain paradise... may it become an altar shrine, a temple... Here let there be a holy home, a haven...a retreat and refuge, an open-hearted hearth, where people... learn to be conscious agents conceiving, realizing world-wide oneness.” A fitting wish for the years ahead, whether they be seventy or seven times seventy!

Thanks to each and every supporter –Your contributions promote progressive values by providing social justice education, inspiration, empowerment, and action – in collaboration with nature and each other. We wanted to appreciate individual donors by name in this newsletter, but not having sought permission from people making summer round up contributions AND, given our unique history with protecting names, we will wait until next year. Thank you for living the World Fellowship way – Thank you for standing up for social justice and respecting all people.

Why support the World Fellowship Center?

For 70 years World Fellowship has provided a unique environment for individuals, families, and movement organizations to reflect, recreate, re-energize, and look ahead. Founders and first directors Charles and Eugenia Weller opened the doors in 1941 with the slogan, "In a time of war, prepare for peace." But without your generous support it will not be here for another 70 years. World Fellowship is possible, and it's happening in Albany, New Hampshire. We ask that you give generously to this critical organization.

How to provide financial support for World Fellowship to live your values:

- ❖ Donate online
 - ◆ Go to www.worldfellowship.org and click "Donate" on the menu at the top of the page for different ways of donating.
- ❖ Donate by check
 - ◆ Mail a check at any time to World Fellowship, PO Box 2280, Conway, NH, 03818.
- ❖ Join our sustaining donors by setting up a recurring donation
 - ◆ A monthly or quarterly donation provides you a way to make a lasting gift – and provides World Fellowship with consistent support. Go to "Donate" on the web site www.worldfellowship.org ; or call the office (603-447-2280) to authorize a recurring charge on your credit card. Alternatively, you may set up electronic payment from your checking account. A $50 a month gift quickly adds up to $600 a year. $20 per month becomes $240 per year. Every little bit adds up – and means a lot! We can also send a monthly reminder envelope.
- Give a tribute gift (birthday, wedding, birth, bat/bar mitzvah, anniversary, etc.)
- ❖ ◆ Contact the office by email office@worldfellowship.org, by phone (603-447-2280), or though the web and we will send a card to your honoree.
- Make a bequest
 - ◆ One of the many ways that friends can choose to express their deep commitment is by naming World Fellowship in your will or trust. This is a way to make a lasting contribution without affecting your current finances. For help creating a will or if you have one and need help changing it to include World Fellowship, we recommend that you contact your local Bar Association and ask them to recommend someone to help you. More information will also be on our website soon.
- ❖ Purchase a place on our Memorial Wall
 - ◆ Our memorial wall celebrates the lives of many of World Fellowships' most devoted individuals who chose to have their remains buried here. To purchase a place on the World Fellowship Memorial Wall we invite you to call the office and speak to Andrea. We provide a form that lets your loved ones know that you have selected your final resting place.
- ❖ Organize a fundraiser or house party in your community
 - ◆ Contact the office and ask for the contact information of the Board of Trustees member who is leading the fundraising committee.
- ❖ Watch for dates to Celebrate the World Fellowship Center's 70th anniversary year.

Other types of support

Join our email list. ◆ Book a speaking engagement. ◆ Volunteer for a specific project. ◆ Tell friends about World Fellowship. Check our wish list for in-kind donations. ◆ Distribute brochures in the Spring. So many possibilities!
